MRS. CHILD TO GOVERNOR WISE, -Mrs. L. Marra Child has written a letter replying to Gov. Wisk's reply to her request for permission to visit John Brown. She says that he is himself fully as bad as he represents John Brown to be; that he has threatened to trample on the Constitution, and break the Union, if a majority of the legal voters in these Confederated States dared to elect a President unfavorable to the extension of slavery, thus giving proof of premeditated treason. To the charge that Brown was "whetting knives of butchery for the mothers, sisters, daughters and babes" of Virginia, she says that Gov. Wise, in 1842, made a speech in Congress, in which he proposed to capture Mexico, making childless and fatherless Mexican mothers and babes, merely to enable slavery to pour itself forth without restraint.

She concludes:

You may believe it or not, Governor Wise, but it is certainly the truth, that because slaveholders so recklessly sowed the wind in Kansas, they reaped the whirlwind at Harber's Ferry. per's Ferry.

The people of the North had a very strong attachment to the Union, but by your desperate measures you have weakened it beyond all power of restoration.

A majority of them would rejoice to have the Slave States fulfill their off-repeated threat of withdrawal from the Union. It has ceased to be a bugbear, for we begin to despair of being able, by any other process, to give the world the example of a real republic. If you would only make the offer of a separation in serious earnest, you would hear the hearty response of millions, "Go, gentlemen, and
"Stand not upon the order your going,
But go at once."

Won'r Ma, Jusu H. Lawis, the new U. S. Marshal, officially announce his appointments, so the speculations and doubts on the subject may be set at reat? We should like to know whether the "efficient gentlemen" who have been filling the offices are retained, or whether some other "efficient gentlemen" have been put in their places. At present all the papers in the city appear to be at sea on the subject, and, like telegraph despatches, are obliged to deny one day what they asserted the day before. Do, Jehu, let us know about it definitely.—Free Democrat, of generator.

We second that motion. Please, Mr. LEWIS, tell us all about it? Who are the new appointees, and how many of our Douglas friends have lost their heads? Is there no Democrat, in all this city and county, of Milwaukee, fit to be appointed Deputy Marsnal? If not, pray borrow a Republican, out of compliment to this "Gibraltar of Democracy."

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER .- The News of yesterday does tardy justice to Col. C. D-Robinson, of Green Bay, by acknowledging that he and his friends labored zealously for the Democratic ticket at the recent election, notwithstanding the fact that Col. R. was defrauded of the regulation nomination for Gov ernor, by "sharp practice."

It is no joke, but a fact of extensive proportions, that the burning of a hay-stack has given Old Virginia a return of the Harper's Ferry convulsions. We are positively sorry to see so many men making fools of themto see so many men making fools of them, selves. The great alarmist seems to be Col.

Lucius Davis, whose first public appearance before the late events in Virginia, was in one of the duels of O. Jennings Wise. Colonel Davis is thus described by the Charlestown correspondent of the New York Tribune:

"Colonel Davis is one of the most remarkatible of the fire-atting species. He is the incurrentation of pompous dignity. His style is so stiff that you would think he had swallowed half the ramrods of his regiment before bidding it farewell. A musical New York reader will understand his general appearance when I say that he resembles Dr. Guilmette when that gentleman is struggling to attain the low D in "The Creation." The Colonel is profuse in whiskers and mountatohe, and as for fase in whiskers and mountatohe, and as for fase in whiskers and mountatohe, and as for hair, I never saw so curious a capillary comfuse in whiskers and moustache, and as for hair, I never saw so curious a capillary combair, I never saw so curious a capillary combair, I never saw so curious a capillary combair. All day he bore it apon his shoulder, and, I verily believe, all night he kept it by him. Some ill-natured persons would have it that the Colonel was himself a little afraid, and undertook to substantiate their statement to that effect, by re-lating how, on one night when he nad re-ceived warnings of an approrching riot, he besought the landlord of the Carter House to let him have the two Pennsylvanians, who captured Cook, in the room with him until morning. But this, of course, is calumny. No one could look upon the Colonel's martial bearing, with his gau upon his shoulder, and his bayonst by his side, and entertain a different thought."

Now, this is the individual who has caused Now, this is the individual who has caused the sudden gathering of troops at Charles town to resist an invasion from Ohio! He heard of the crossing of the Ohio river, near Wheeling, by a host of sympath/sera with Brown, and considering that the shie-bodied men of Ohio were marching upon Virginia in masses, he sent through the telegraph a call for troops.

The editor of the Baltimore American gives the following account of the panic pro-duced at Harper's Ferry by that melancholy bird, the whip-por-will:

duced at Harper's Ferry by that melancholy bird, the whip-por-will:

"We were present during the night of wild excitement at Harper's Ferry, when the frightened farmer, James Moore, mistaking the cry of the whip-por-will on the mountains for the screams of his neighbors, rode into the town calling to the people to arm themselves and proceed to the assistance of the people in the valley, who were being murdered by Captain Cook and his band of Abolitonists. Of all the citizens of the Ferry, no one seemed to doubt the truth of the story, and the strangers who were present were regarded with suspicion for expressing the belief that Captain Cook was flying from rather than committing any act that would place him in farther jeopardy.

Col. Lee, who had command of the Marines, endeavored to quiet the panic and scouted the whole story, but when he found that the entire population of the vicinity had been aroused by the alarm spread by the excited messenger, and were flooking into town with their wives and children for safety, he concluded to start out with a sanad of men to. concluded to start out with a squad of men to quiet the general apprehension. In a short time he returned and reported the supposed victims of the massacre to have been all sound asleep, and somewhat frightened by the appearance of a military force under their windows.'

The excitement at Charlestown is undoubtedly just about as ridiculous as that describ-ed above, and all Virginia is under arms, and we hear little through the telegraph but news of the marching and counter-marching of troops, the giving cut of ammunition, and the "pomp, pride and circumstance of glori-ons war. And in Eastern Virginia it is treason to laugh at all this folly .- Cin. Com.,

PHILOSOPHY OF DREAMS. BY II. DELDING BERGESS,

In jocund youth, who never yet hath seen The landscape of his future life in dreams The loftlest pillar ever carved by man. The proudest deck that ever plow'd the main, The grandest battles ever fought or won, The noblest deeds e'er wrought beneath the sun-Have oft in childhood's morning hours I ween Been crowded in a single transient dream. Some dreams no doubt as traces of the past Are faint impressions of our daily toil; And oft do steal upon our wearied brain

Fro we retire to our accustomed sleep :-A sort of waking dream—a fancy view Of the dear life that we have led before,— And these may follow us e'en to nur couch And serve as monitors to wake us up; But most dreams shadow forth what is to come. Our life in one sense is a fleeting dreata Wrapped in a mantling cloud, Which, ever fading, is ne'er bletted out The counterpart of this our entity, So deuse a mist, so deep a shadow is

The dream of life unfolded by a dream? Could nature hit upon a wiser plan? Youth is the time of dreams-age of visious, And thus the old in retrospective thought Look back upon their prime of life and being As filmies: vapor of a childhood's dream. So, the, the youth, whose plans and projects all In dreams, full emineus of juy or wee, Buth his whole future destiny unmasted

As nought but dreams may ever prostrate

And pray what is a dream and what its parter Whoever yet hath analyzed a dream? What are its motions, what its tendencies, And most of all, why do we ever dream? Why see the old in visions and anon. They mark the rise and fall of nations' games;

Viewing carth's dramas all in miniatures

Beholding the world's mighty deeds unborn ? And why do the young dream dreams, night vis'o Disclosing the days to come, manhood's prime, Living ere they have fived their coming years? Surely nature in her kindliest mood Hath wrought her utmost for our happiness,

And dreams unfold realities. Doubtless these types of ancient prophecies Do prove prohetic verifies; as when Thoughts from the visions of the night, When deep sleep falleth upon man proclaim As saith the Temmite, "An Angel's voice." Here, then, is solved the problem of our dreams.

Dream we for nought? nay, but we relish them Doubt as we may this higher law of love, Prophetic visious as the voice of God Moving the hearts of men in ancient days, Revealing first in dreams, next in visions. That highest and best form of revelation Of good will to men-doubting this we say, Yet all do dream and all do relisi, them.

Strange man! Joyful and hopeful in a dream, But just a dream maps out his course for life : Beaming and happy wit h so small a guide, And yet will foult a dream inspired, the good, The ancient prophecy—strange, strange indeed !

PROCLAMATION—THANKSGIVING.

ANOTHER YEAR, with its varied experiences and vicissitudes, has nearly gone, the seed time and harvest have passed away, and the products of the enrith more have passed away, and the products of the enrith more abundant and excellent, in tunny respects than usual, have been gathered in. Our State has been favored by an overruling Providence with exemption from peatience or any prevailing disease, and the commercial and finaucial distress, under which our hand has so long suffered, stems to be approaching an end. As a State we have been free from evil disturbances, and men have gone about their daily avocations in peace and quietness. As a nation, too, we have been exempted from the scenes of blood which have been the result in other lands of the shock of contending hosts.

It is right that we should, as a people, render the tribute of our trains to the Author of all good, for the establishment and continuance of our free institutions, for the general health and prosperity of our people, for the blessings of peace, for the privileges of free education, and freedom to worship God according to the dictates of conscience, and for all the unnumbered diessings, individual and national, so boundinily show ered upon us.

Therefore, in accordance with the lime-honored PROCLAMATION-THANKSGIVING.

licenses of the state of the st that, abstaining from their secular avocations on that day, they unite in their several localities in grateful praise to Almighty God, for his constant care and abundant mercies.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed
L.S. my name and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed.
Done at Maddoon,this 30th day of October, in the year

By the Governor,
ALEX, W. RANDALL,
J. D. RUGGLES, Ass't Secretary of State.

Mr. Seward and the Presidency.

The Springfield Republican refers to the recent result of the election in New York, in a line of remark so full of good sense and propriety, that we copy from its article. It savs of the result :

says of the result:

New York thus assures her your to the Republican candidate in 1864, and justfies her Republicans in presenting Mr. Seward to the National Convention for the Tresidential nomination. Had not these issues we have directived been made up, and presented by the opposition, the small majority, though for the first time a najority, would have been felt as a sign of weakness rather than of strength, flut the fact that the election whas a kattle constitutes of the result a victory, and one that, so far as New York and Mr. Seware are concerned, carries with it great moral power. The Requirement, one replain in presenting Mr. Seward, They could have no other candidate, if they would; and we presume they would not, if they could.

would; and we presume they would not, if they could.

New York proposes Mr. Seward—It will be for the people of other States to say if he shall be accepted as the Republican leader in name in 1800, as he always has been its leader in principle. If enough of their shall think and can say that he can have their votes in the electoral college, to place him in the Presidential chair, then he will have the nomination. He will not be rejected because he is not fit either to lead the party or to govern the country; his right, his fidelity, his expacity all Republicans admit. The only question that will be asked is, can he be elected? Satisfied that ke can be, not no other man will be manced in the Convention, and the fate of Mr. Saward's brieflamine as strations for the Presidency. To the intelligent colution of the question both Mr. Seward's brieflamine as strations for the residency. To the intelligent colution of the question both Mr. Seward's brieflam and feet and leaders in twestigation. The power to elect the President is theirs; they can and should settle the result in November by the nomination in May.

That Mr. Seward "can be elected," admits, we think, of no question. He is the strongest man with the People, as he is the ablest Statesman in the Senate. And no man familiar with his political career can doubt that he would make the best and safest President the Republic has had for twentyfive years.

A Weak Invention.

The News, troubled to account for a disastrous defeat where it had confidently predicted a decisive victory, says of the result in this State:

The truth is, although we do not expect the Republi-cans will acknowledge it, they saved themselves by pro-plinating a Cheago interest, which is bound to trobbe them before they get through with it. Randull's pledge to the people in the western part of the State, to pro-vide for them another Railroad connection with Chea-go, by applying the land grant to that object, must either be fulfilled or broken, before long, as the vote of Dodge and Columbia counties prove that delays are dangerous.

This is a mere re-hash of one of the News electioneering fictions. As it paid very poorly before election, we wonder that the News should revive it afterwards. The only "pledge" Gov. RANDALL has given to any part of the State, in connection with the Land Grant, is to see that the will of the People, as expressed through the Legislature, is faithfully carried out.

Surmises as to indiscretions on the part of the Queen obtained momentary currency, but were instantly discredited. No statements have been made by the official papers on the subject. Mr. Nelson was formerly a resident of New York, and from the accession of Kamehameha until the fatal quarrel, had enjoyed the monarch's unlimited confidence and regard.

But, even though you should be too poor, or too mean, to pay for the documents, send him the names.

All this, you say, will cost something. Yes, it certainly will. And if we are not prepared to pay something, we cannot take the Treasury out of the hands which now oluteh it, and we may just as well give it up first as last. BY OWEN MEREDITS. Midnight past? Not a sound of aught
Through the silent house but the wind at his prayer

I sat by the dying fire, and thought Of the dear dead woman up stairs. Nabody with me my watch to keep, But the friend of my boson, the man I love; And grief had sent him fast to sleep In the chamber up above.

Nobody else, in the country place All round, that knew of my loss beside, But the good young priest with the Raphael face, Who confessed her when she died. "On her cold, dead bosom my portrait lies, Which next to her heart she used to wear Hanning it o'er with her tender eyes When my own face was not there."

And I said: "The thing is precious to me; They will bury her soon in the churchyard clay; It lies on her hear, and lost must be, If I do not take it away."

As I stretched my hand, I held my breath, I turned as I drew the curtains apart:
I dared not look on the face of death:
I knew where to find her heart.

I thought, at first, as my touch fell there, It had warmed that heart to life, with love; For the thing I touched was warm, I swear, And I could feel it move.

Twas the hand of a man that was moving slow O'er the heart of the dead—from the other side; And at once the sweat broke over my brow, "Who is robbing the corpse?" I cried.

Opposite me by the taper's light,
The friend of my bosom, the man I loved,
Stood over the corpse, and all as white,
And neither of us moved. "What do you here, my friend?" The msn Looked first at me, and then at the dead. "There is a portrait here," he began; "There is. It is mine," I said.

Said the friend of my bosom: "Yours, no doubt, The portrait was, till a mouth ago, When this suffering angel took that out, And placed mine there, I know."

"This woman, she loved me well," said f,
"A month ago," said my friend to me:
"And Ingour throat," I groaned "you lie!"
He answered: "Let us see."

We found the portrait there, in its place;
We opened it by the tapur's shine;
The gems were all unchanged; the face
Was-neither his nor raine. "One nall drives out another, at least!
The face of the portrait there," I cried,
"Is our friend's, the Rapbac-faced young priest,
Who confessed her when she die."

Lieutenant Maury's First Marriage. The following bit of romance in the life of Lieutenant Maury is related by Mr. Willers, in the Home Journal:

In the Home Journac.

In the early days of his professional career, the present "Commander" was a midshipman on board one of the sloops of war sent to cruise in the Pacific. The duty begins with the sign and bodieties continuous. ing mainly to give authoritative countenance to the merchant vessels in those seas, much of their time, of course was passed in the anchorage of the different islands; and Maury ancorage of the different islands; and Maury always having a taste for languages, had employed hismany an idle hour as coxswain of the go-ashore bont, in mastering the dialects of the natives. The thing he most struggled with, in those days, was a constitutional bashfulness; and he was not a little flabburgasted, therefore, when he was summoned to the quarter deck one bright morning, to interpret between the one bright morning, to interpret between the communder and a young Owhyhee princess, the favorite daughter of the Chief of the island where they were anchored. She had swam off to the ship and climbed up the side, and now stood in all her tropical florescence, an exquisitely developed young woman of sixteen, draped mainly in her flowing tresses and unconscious modesty, and gesticulating in the most lively manner, to the very great admiration of the officers and crew. She had evidently a message of importance to communicate.

The delays were apparently inconsiderable. In a very short time the runaway bride appeared, dressed in all manner of Pacific ornaments, and attended by her mother and a bay of sister istandresses. The Commodore was either not expected, or not missed; the ceremony was performed, (what there was of it,) with only native wilnesses, and "things proceeded as usual."

"For the remaining winter months, the sloop was anchored at the same island, and Prince Maury, of course, had a nice opportunity to become acquainted with the manners and customs. His copper-colored papa proved very gentlemanly, and, as long as he stayed, he was most affectionately treated. His subsequent half century, as the world of science so well knows, has been devoted to the study of nature's more universal unexpectedness—the charm of this first lesson, acting, perhaps, as an initiative relish—but, whether so or not, this Owhyhee romance, as a prelude to a very distinguished man's life-long pursuits, is well worth preserving for his biographer.

Few buy ers were in the market, however, as the demand for shipping ceases to a great extent with the expiration of Insurance, which takes place to-norrow, and the sales in all, were inside of 10,000 bushels. The lates es were made at the following prices: 98c for Extra Club: 90@03c for Club; $7: for No. 1 at lower depots, and $5c at upper; $6c for No. 2. Wet not untarbrable weather was the cause of this, but in addition puckers are afraid of $6, and the *Bort to establish that price reacted undavorably, and the feeling was hardly as strong as noticed in our last report.
